Any additional training needs: Ankamali is a smart, loving, older lady who is gradually learning to trust her carers after the loss of her previous owner.	Type of home needed: Ankamali needs a stable, loving home with a patient adopter — ideally someone who can offer her gentle attention, a quiet environment, and the time to build trust. She would do best as the only dog, especially with a female companion, and will thrive in a calm, quiet household with encouragement and understanding of her sensitivities. She loves being the centre of attention, enjoys gentle play, and is affectionate with people. She flourishes in an environment where she receives lots of encouragement and love. She is housetrained, friendly to other dogs and people on walks, and can be left alone without issue. She's not keen on harnesses or anything placed over her head, though she will tolerate it if handled carefully. Ankamali enjoys fair weather walks and snuggling. She is happy to be left alone and will sleep in her bed when left.
